

New issue

Notification not received on Android mobile #4322

Open

Description

Some Android users report that they do not receive push notifications in the mobile application after receiving new emails.

Expected result

When a user receives a new email, the Android mobile application immediately sends a push notification to the user's device (according to the app's notification settings and OS permissions).

Current behavior

No push notification is displayed on the user's Android device when a new email is received, even though the mobile application is installed.

Acceptance criteria

Each time a user receives a new email, if the Android mobile application is installed and notifications are enabled for the app and relevant notification channel, the user receives a push notification on their device.
Behavior is verified on supported Android OS versions and devices, including Android 13+ where runtime notification permission is required.
If notifications are disabled at OS level or for the app's notification channel, the app does not send a notification and this is considered compliant behavior.

Context

Platform: Android mobile application.

Step 1

Please note that this is acceptable to just show: You received an email - once

We do not need to show the list of subject etc if the background worker prevents executing background requests.

Step 2

Back: Implement Vapid key advertizing cf <https://datatracker.ietf.org/doc/rfc9749/>

Mobile: Use WebPush + Vapid Key instead of FCM - This would give use more flexibility over the payload and allow to use web push encryption

Step 3

Back + front: implement <https://datatracker.ietf.org/doc/draft-ietf-jmap-emailpush/> (to ALWAYS be used with WebPush Encryption!)

That way back would transmit email details, and would enable to display NICE notifications without backend request needed.

Step 2 is a strong STRONG prerequisite.
